GERMANS FAIL TO ESCAPE CHERBOURG TRAP 13 Troop-Carrying Barges Sunk Off Saipan Island

Counterattack Is Repulsed by American Force

Jap Casualties Believed Heavy

By CHARLES H. McMURTRY
UNITED STATES PACIFIC
HEADQUARTERS PEARL HAR-BOR, June 18 (AP)—A Japanese attempt to counterattack the Yanks fighting desperately on southwestern Saipan island, was repulsed with the destruction of thirteen Japanese troop-carrying barges, Adm. Nimitz announced today.

Armed American landing craft on Saturday smashed this movement to land troops south of Garapan and cut off the Americans who have already captured approximately ten square miles of the island.

Many Casualties Likely

The capacity of Japanese barges varies from twenty to 100 men, so Nipponese casualties might have been anywhere from 260 to 1,300 troops.

Nimitz did not indicate what type of landing craft repulsed the counterattack nor whether the enemy used any larger supporting vessels.
Lacking the latter information, it was presumed that the Nipponese attempted to slip along the shore for a sneak strike in the darkness of early morning.

Alternately smashing down Japanese counterattacks and attacking across the shell-torn canefields of Southern Saipan island, American assault troops have advanced halfway across Japan's most heavily fortified island in the Marianas chain.

Twenty-five Japanese tanks were wiped out and heavy casualties inflicted when the enemy made a determined counterattack before dawn Friday, Adm. Nimitz announced yesterday.

Marines Renew Advance

After sunrise United States marines and infantrymen renewed their advance. They captured the village of Hinashisu and drove to the edge of Aslito airdrome, two miles from their original beachhead. By nightfall they had advanced an average of 1,500 yards.
The entire five and a half mile length of the American front was under heavy enemy fire.

An aged destroyer which saw action in World War I and has since been converted into a destroyer transport, stole the spotlight from battleships and aircraft carriers.
Unaided, it sank five enemy coastal freighters. Twenty-nine survivors were made prisoners of war. Since the start of the Saipan invasion last Wednesday twenty-one Japanese ships have been sunk and 201 enemy sailors taken prisoner.

Captured Nazis Still Confident

Sure Robot Bombs Will Beat Allies

By ROGER D. GREENE WITH BRITISH FORCES IN FRANCE, June 18 (AP)—Captured German officers said today they still expected Germany to win the war and they pinned their faith on the robot bomber as "our great weapon of the war."

"Soon we will destroy London and other big cities of England with our pilotless planes," boasted a 45-year-old colonel.

"We have enough of these planes to destroy the Isle of Wight in four hours. Your night fighters cannot stop them. Nothing can stop them. That's why we know we're going to win the war."

In the next breath the colonel acknowledged:

"It is worse for us in this war than in the last because we have too many fronts."
Like all German officers taken prisoner the colonel began to spout a machine-gun stream of words when asked if the fuhrer still is popular in Germany despite defeat on the Russian and Italian fronts.
When they start on "mein fuhrer" they talk like automatons. You can see it has been drilled into them.
As officers they say the "correct" things. But German privates spat at the name "Hitler."

The colonel freely answered these questions:

What about the big German robot guns which were supposed to destroy London from across the channel?

"Propaganda," he said briefly.

Those Invisible Planes

And what about the noiseless, invisible Nazi planes Goebbels invented to reassure the German troops who complained they never saw the Luftwaffe protecting them?

"It may be the planes are there

1,300 American Bombers Attack Oil Refineries

Targets in Germany Dealt Hard Blows

By AUSTIN BEALMEAR

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS
ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, June 18 (AP)—An all-American armada of more than 1,300 heavy bombers dealt punishing blows to oil refineries and storage plants in the Hamburg area and other targets in Northwest Germany today while up to 250 other heavy bombers pounded the Pas-de-Calais sector of France in the sixth Allied assault on that German "secret weapon" bases area.

This continuing assault on the Pas-de-Calais came as the Germans continued their flying bomb attacks on Southern England throughout the day and on into the evening, causing additional damage and casualties.

No Serious Opposition

Although American planes struck from Hamburg on down through Western Germany, where three airfields were bombed, and on into Paris area, where Mustangs attacked supply lines, the German air force put up no serious opposition.

Not one enemy fighter arose to challenge the great fleet striking into Germany but the Germans threw up a flak barrage described as one of the heaviest ever encountered.

More than 1,000 individual flights were made by Ninth air force Thunderbolts, Lightnings and Mustangs in their attacks on hundreds of moving targets on the Corbours peninsula, blows at military objectives of Pas-de-Calais and sweeps into Central France near Paris, Amiens and Arras.

Bricker or Dewey?

Governors in Political Spotlight With Supporters of Both Confident

(By The Associated Press)

Predictions came from rival camps yesterday (Sunday) that 1-Chu-Governor John W. Bricker will be the Republican party's candidate for president and 2—that New York's Governor Thomas E. Dewey will win the nomination on the first ballot at the party's national convention.

Roy D. Moore, one of Bricker's campaign directors, expressed belief the convention starting June 26 would name the Ohioan because he was the "most likely to win the election."

He asserted no one could tell how the first ballot would go because there were too many delegates who either have not been instructed for any candidate, or who have not otherwise indicated a choice.

ence in Chicago, where the GOP

Don Whitehead Tells Story of Peninsular Drive

Reports Massacre Of Nazi Troops

By DON WHITEHEAD

WITH THE AMERICAN TROOPS ON CHERBOURG PENINSULA, June 18 (AP)—American troops have cut through the Cherbourg neck in a "last mile" drive and have beaten off the first fanatical German attempt to break out of the Peninsular trap.

The American Ninth division solidly sealed the last enemy escape corridor today, capping a dramatic and historic three and a half day drive westward to the sea.

Doughboys Reach Sea

The doughboys cut the peninsula's west coastline highway last night and officially reached the sea at 11 p. m. June 17 to climax the swift thrust.

Now the stopper is in the bottle and the big question is how long it will take to clean out stubborn resistance and smash through to the port of Cherbourg.

I visited the closed corridor today with other correspondents and got an idea of the confusion which enveloped the Germans when the American advance swept forward so that the last of the enemy units were literally running in circles trying to find a way out of the trap.

Repulse Counterattack

But there was no way out except to overrun the Yankees' strangle-line to the sea—and the Germans already had tried that and failed.

The Americans cut the western coastline road in two places—at Barneville and at St. Lo d'Orville —and immediately got set to repulsed the Germans' counterattack which came today.

It literally was a massacre—the massacre of St. Jacques De Nehour.
That is where the Americans battered the Germans in one of the bloodiest encounters of the invasion.
St. Jacques De Nehour lies directly north of the St. Lo d'Orville crossroads, where the dough-boys first sliced across the peninsula road to cut off the enemy escape route.

There the Germans made their bid to escape, under orders rumored to have been from their high commander. But before giving an account of this bitter engagement, there is some background which should be given.

Drive to High Ground

When the Ninth division burst through stubborn German defenses on Friday and swept forward toward the sea, units of the division drove to the high ground east of Barneville, while another unit pushed on to a ridge northeast of St. Lo d'Orville. Then units of the Northern force pushed on into Barneville, while southern troops moved into St. Lo d'Orville, thus cutting the coast road in two places.

In the meantime the enemy's Seventy-seventh division troops attempted to withdraw south to La Haye Du Puits, but the routes of withdrawal already had been cut by doughboys.

Nazi Division Attacks

The German Seventy-seventh division made a desperate effort at 6
a. m. Today to break through the doughboys' wedge of steel. Their infantry, supported by armor, moved southward.

In the early morning haze, a battle of small arms fire broke out.
Then the bigger guns engaged in the fighting, and for a confused, exciting time, the battle raged seemingly in all directions.

One commentator for Transocean,
the Nazi propaganda agency, gave
this account which he said came
from returning air combat crews:

CREW OF SUPERFORTRESS JUST BEFORE BOMBING OF JAPAN

SNAPPED BEFORE THEIR GIANT B-29, somewhere in India, these members of the crew of one of America's new air battleships are shown just before boarding their plane for a take-off on June 12. Three days later a big fleet of these Superfortresses took off to bomb the steel-producing center of Yawata in Japan. This picture was flown to Washington by the Air Transport Command. The boys shown may have participated in the big raid. They are, left to right, Lt. A. Borres, pilot, Monroeville, Ohio; Lt. Harold Johnson, co-pilot, Duluth, Minn.; Lt. Don McComas,

Hitler's Robots Less of Menace

British Getting Range on Rockets

By EDWARD D. BALL

LONDON, June 18 (AP)—Hitler's shabby winged comet bombs scattered destruction across Southern England today, as the trumpeting Berlin radio applied the new tag of "hell hounds" to the weird weapons and conjured up fantastic pictures of "horror and devastation" in their wake.

But this weapon no longer was a secret to British ground gunners and fighter pilots who rapidly were getting their sights trained on the ghostly rockets. A number were believed destroyed in flight.

British Bag Robot

RAF fighters patrolling over the channel were believed to have bagged at least one during the morning, and during the night the path of the bombs which zoomed inland was marked by solid bursts of anti-aircraft fire.

Easily visible in the bright June sunshine, a number of the fire-spitting, jet-propelled rockets streaked across the straits during the day, causing damage and casualties, but their scatter-gun effects scarcely could match the lurid accounts of destruction which tumbled in an unending torrent from the German radio.

One commentator for Transocean,
the Nazi propaganda agency, gave
this account which he said came
from returning air combat crews:

Report "Horrid Picture"

"They saw a horrid picture. At many places the night was lit by extensive fires and amid this scene of fire blazing to the sky the tremendous explosions gave witness to the devastating effect of the new German weapon."

A German-inspired report from Madrid, quoting an unnamed Swedish eyewitness, said that "the panic in London was far greater than in 1940."

One of the pilotless craft plunged into a chapel in Southern England, where a Sunday service was in progress. A passing convoy of United States Army ambulances joined in the rescue work.

Praises Americans

In another place, where a rocket bomb struck a group of hospital buildings, a perspiring policeman found that "those Yanks are wonderful," after volunteer squads of American troops pitched in and worked feverishly to clear the debris.
Only one small building of the group was left standing and ten persons were killed, including some members of the hospital staff.

Severe Earthquake Rocks Los Angeles

LOS ANGELES, June 18 (AP)—A second severe earthquake shock was recorded in Los Angeles at 8:05 o'clock tonight. It lasted several seconds and its rocking motion swayed downtown buildings. A previous shock at 5:03 p. m. was confined to the Metropolitan Los Angeles area and did no material damage.

Taft on Four Freedoms: Senator Says Americans Fight For Own Freedom, Not Ideology

BETHANY, W. Va., June 18 (AP)— The people of the United States are fighting to preserve their own freedom rather than for the four freedoms or democracy or any other ideology, Sen. Robert A. Taft (R-Ohio) declared today.

Addressing the graduating class of Bethany College, Taft asserted:

"We cannot assure freedom of speech and freedom of religion in Russia, for instance, unless we are prepared to fight the rest of our lives. We can hardly be fighting for democracy when so many of our Allies—China, Russia and Brazil—are dictatorships without the semblance even of election machinery."

Discussing the Teheran conference, Taft said:

"Apparently there was not the slightest effort on our part to bring Russia in line with the idea of the Atlantic charter, or any postwar settlement on which permanent peace can be based."

Old Mannerheim Line Is Smashed

Russians Score Important Gains

By RUSSELL LANDSTROM

LONDON, June 18 (AP)—Russia's Leningrad army under Marshal Leonid A. Govorov has smashed through the old Mannerheim line whose collapse caused Finland's capitulation in the 1939-40 winter war, and is within seventeen miles of Finland's second city of Viipuri at the top of the Karelian isthmus, Moscow announced tonight.

Finnish Premier Edwin Linkomies acknowledging that the Russians had scored a "considerable success" in their effort to knock Finland out of the war, called on his people to fight on to the end.

"Fighting for Freedom"

"We are fighting for our freedom," Linkomies said in a Helsinki broadcast. "We cannot imagine life here except as a free and independent people."

Koivisto, western anchor of the old Mannerheim line was seized by the Russians who pushed on through Maksalahti, seventeen miles south of Viipuri, the Russian communiqué said. Koivisto, also known as Bjorko, is on the Gulf of Finland, and its capture represented a fifty-three-mile coastal gain in nine days since the offensive began June 10 at Belostrov.

Evacuating Viipuri

Viipuri, with a peacetime population of 70,000, is being evacuated.
German broadcasts said.

The Russians were declared to have gained all along a seventy-two-mile front from Koivisto and

Germans Forced Back in Italy

French Colonials Join Allied Forces

By LYNN HEINZERLING

ROME, June 18 (AP)—French Colonials cleared the Germans from their central and southern strongholds on Elba today in a drive to secure the seaward flank of a mainland push rolling up the Italian peninsula all along the line.

The Eighth army fought yesterday into the outskirts of Perugia, big road hub eighty-five miles north of Rome and about seventy-two miles southeast of Florence, near where the enemy may make a stand for what may be a final reckoning in Italy.

French Take Part

Dispatches from the barren isle where Napoleon spent his first exile revealed the operation was a combined effort of the Allies with the French storming ashore after British and United States naval units, with an assist from British commandos and Allied air forces, had cleared the way.

Associated Press correspondent Joseph Dynan, in a field dispatch said ships were bringing wounded to Bastia, in Corsica across the narrow strait, and that a number of prisoners had been taken.

The German communiqué declared forces landing in the north and southeast of the island were thrown back into the sea, but ac-knowledgeed a bridgehead had been established at Marina Di Campo, on the south coast and said a coastal battery had damaged a British cruiser of the London class.

Shell Shore Defenses

A brief naval announcement said British and United States units carrying the French to Elba were preceded by minesweepers while gunboats poured fire on shore defenses.

Dynan reported British naval Commandos slipped past the German garrison, entered Golfo Di

Normandy Coast Well Protected

SOMEWHERE ON THE AMERI-CAN BEACHHEAD IN FRANCE, June 17 (Delayed) (AP)—Probably no place in the world is better protected from aerial attack than the strip of Normandy coast on which American forces are landing supplies for their invasion army.

In describing the greatest concentration of potential anti-aircraft fire in history, Lt.-Gen. Omar N.
Bradley's anti-aircraft officer disclosed today that on D-Day and D-plus-one, more anti-aircraft troops were landed on the beachhead than were in the entire American army in 1939.

Rocket Eyewitness:

James M. Long Sees Comet Bombs As No More Powerful Than Others

By JAMES M. LONG

SOMEWHERE IN SOUTHERN ENGLAND, June 18 (AP)—I have watched two of Germany's vaunted comet bombs burn out their driving force, wing over, plummet into their death dive and explode—no less than 200 yards away.

And for all of Berlin radio's fantastic claims their destructive force did not seem greater than the regular 1,000 pounders dumped on London this February and March.
So far Britain's defense is being left primarily to anti-aircraft fire to knock out the winged bombs as they rocket inland.

Along their last miles they come in low and slow—seemingly at no more than 200 miles an hour at a height of about 1,000 feet.

They are much the same shape and size as a small fighter plane with stubby wings.

They buzz like a circular saw chewing through a knotty pine board and can be heard several miles.

Those I saw plummeted at less than thirty-degree angle glide, seemingly to gain speed. They titled over slowly, wings aslant catching the wind and going into a slow turn.

They smashed into buildings at about a thirty-degree dive and still on a tightening curve.

The explosion, with much the same sound and shock as any other bomb blast, seemed to come at almost the instant of the first impact before the flying bomb buried itself into the building.

Fresh Division Slaughtered by American Forces

Yanks Widening Normandy Salient

By JAMES M. LONG

ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Monday, June 19 (AP)— American troops, headed by the Ninth division, blasted a seven-mile-wide path across the neck of the Cherbourg peninsula Sunday, putting a stranglehold on 25,000 to 30,000 Germans in and around the prized port of Cherbourg, and then slashed the Nazi Seventy-seventh division to pieces in a bloody massacre when the enemy frantically tried to break out.

The Allied midnight communiqué, confirming earlier dispatches direct from the field, said the peninsula was cut off from the rest of Normandy when the Americans reached the West coast near Barne-ville-Sur-Mer.

Plans Carefully Made

That was the exact point where the cut-off had been planned by officers who worked out the problem on sand-tables long before the invasion of France began June 6.

The battle on which the success of the bold American stroke hinged began seven hours after the first troops had reached the sea. It raged for two with the Ninth division laying down the heaviest concentration of mortar fire since D-Day and climaxing it with an artillery "serenade"—a thundering chorus of every available gun hurling shells into the point of greatest danger.

The German Seventy-seventh division, attacking in waves, virtually committed suicide in this inferno.
Its remnants finally fled north under relentless assault from Allied fighter planes and dive-bombers with Nazi dead. American Thun-derbolts alone were credited by the Ninth air force with killing or wounding at least 800 of the fleeing foe.

Americans Widen Salient

Following up the Nazi retreat, the Americans steadily widened their salient and rushed up reinforcements and guns in anticipation of new counterattacks from either north or south.

Reports from Twenty-first army group headquarters said, however, that any real rescue attempt by the Germans was unlikely and that the vital port of Cherbourg would not remain long in enemy hands.

The Allied communiqué contained word of no new developments elsewhere on the front but confirmed that in the center of the beachhead area a steady advance had brought the Allies within six miles of St. Lo, a key road junction. On the eastern flank, the British and Canadians still were tightly engaging German armor.

Despite low clouds over Europe, 1,300 Flying Fortresses and Liberators—the biggest single force yet hurled against a tactical target in daylight—pounded Germany, while lighter planes ranged the Normandy battlefront in a variety of attacks.

Hit Terrific Punch

A terrific punch by the veteran United States Ninth Infantry Division—rolling twenty and one-half miles in two days for the invasion's fastest gain—drove clear across the peninsula and secured the seacoast between Cape Carteret, eighteen miles southwest of Cherbourg, and St. Lo d'Orville.

It blocked off some 400 square miles of the upper peninsula, and thousands of Germans faced with a possible Sevastopol defense of France's third largest port. The first United States spearhead reached the coast at 11 p. m. Saturday night.

Lt.-Gen. Omar N. Bradley's shock troops forced this line twenty-four miles across the cape—the deepest invasion penetration—to chop off Cherbourg while Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's British and Canadians held four Nazi armored divisions deadlocked on the eastern flank in Normandy.

Ninth Division Attacks

The Ninth division veterans of North Africa broke out west and south of fallen St. Sauveur Le Vicomte, clinched a hold on Barne-ville ten miles west, then drove on two and one-half miles to occupy Cape Carteret in sight of the channel islands, and fanned south to take St. Lo d'Orville.

The danger-point of their cross-peninsula belt is a sector only four miles wide at St. Sauveur Le Vicomte, and the Americans' likeliest immediate move is to widen it against the peril of counterattacks by smashing down the rail and road line to La Haye Du Puits, a funnel for German reinforcements farther down on the peninsula.

Elton C. Fay Says: German Counter-Attack Appears Probable on Normandy Sectors

By ELTON C. FAY
Associated Press War Analyst
The Allies' success in isolating the Cherbourg peninsula may precipitate a major, coordinated German counter-attack which up to now has failed to develop on the Normandy front.

For almost two weeks there has been a series of heavy, bitter fights as the Allies expanded the beachhead.

The Nazis have fed in increasing numbers of tactical reserves to oppose the thrusts, but these engagements have been more or less localized.

General Attack Expected

The challenge presented by the cutting off of the peninsula, however, quite likely may goad the enemy into attempting a general counter-attack. He would have good reasons.

1. He does not want the excellent port of Cherbourg to fall into Allied hands.
2. If he believes that must happen, he will want to delay the time as long as possible.
3. For a time, until the Nazi forces trapped on the end of the peninsula begin to weaken for lack of supplies and because of losses and fatigue, the Germans will have the Allied forces extended westward across the peninsula to Barneville in a position where they will have to fight on both flanks.

To enhance their prospects in the defense of the Cherbourg area and in attempting to cut the Allied arm across the peninsula, it is reasonable to suppose the Germans will decide on an early general counter-attack.

Americans To Predominate

On the basis of the present known deployment of Allied forces, it would appear that American troops will predominate in the land campaign to reduce the German garrison and defenses at Cherbourg. Five American infantry and two airborne divisions are known to be on the front.

Mrs. Bruce Mathewson, Fair Lawn, sang "My World" and "What God Hath Promised." As the couple knelt at the prayer bench Mrs. David Chichester and Mrs. Bruce Mathewson sang, "Savior Like A Shepherd Lead Us," accompanied by Mrs. Andrew Van Emburgh at the piano.

The mother of the bride wore a salmon crepe gown while the bridegroom's mother was attired in a gown with a wine chiffon velvet top and pink sheer skirt. The bridal table at the reception held in Lafayette Hall, Hawthorne, was beautifully decorated with pink sweet peas, white carnations and white roses.

Upon return from a trip to Rochester, N. Y., the couple will spend a few days at the bridegroom's home at Westernport.

Ernest Kuykendall Injured in Wreck

By LIKE McDOWELL

KEYSER, W. Va., June 18.—Ernest Kuykendall, Moorefield, was admitted to Potomac Valley hospital at noon Saturday, suffering from injuries received in an accident when a truck he was driving got out of control and ran away on the steep grade between Ridgeville and Knobley farm on United States Route 50.

Kuykendall was traveling east in an empty truck belonging to J. B. Lewis for whom he worked. It is believed that in attempting to start the truck, the machine failed, thus leaving the truck in the fall gear.

and the driver realizing his danger on the winding road, jumped.

He landed head first in a concrete culvert on the left side of the road, sustaining lacerations on the left side of his face and the fracture of the collar bone, also several ribs were fractured. While his injuries are not considered dangerous they are painful. He was too overcome from shock to be able to tell much as to how the accident occurred.

Trooper L. E. Proudfoot stated that the truck had turned over and the cab was wrecked.

New Deal Trend That Should Be Stopped

NOT ONLY does the recent decision of the federal supreme court that the insurance industry comes under interstate commerce—and therefore is subject to federal regulation and control—threaten the stability of one of the biggest businesses of the country, but it also holds other disturbing implications.

Until now all insurance has been state-regulated. The threat lies in the fact that a governmental bureaucracy may be established to administer the affairs of an industry upon which millions have depended and will depend for security in old age, and for protection against want for loved ones and possibly others. To endanger insurance assets is to attack the very foundation of the nation's financial system. In the main, they represent the life savings of those insured. Jeopardize those savings and there is little left.

Fortunately, Congress has the authority to prevent this confiscation of the insurance business, the vast sums of which the New Dealers have long viewed with greedy eyes. If it acts in the clear interest of the American people, it will insist that insurance remain free from meddling bureaucrats, who see in this great business a potent field. After seventy-five years of effective regulation by the several states, it would seem strange that the discovery has just been made that the job is one for the federal government—except for the fact that the discovery is made by New Dealers.

It is indicative of the entire New Deal trend, a trend which, unless it is stopped at the end of the third term, may easily lead to national disaster.

Shoe Finally Goes On the Other Foot

NOBODY has to tell the Germans the value of sabotage and civilian confusion behind the enemy's lines. One of the chief reasons for the sudden collapse of France was the havoc wreaked by Nazi agents among French transportation facilities far to the rear of the fighting front.

Now it looks very much as if the sabotage-civilian confusion shoe were being tried on the other foot. French patriots are reported rising in various parts of the country distant from the fighting in Normandy. Dispatches reaching Spain say that well-armed guerrillas have seized strategic centers in the cities of Toulouse, Limoges and Tarbes in Southern France and have shot collaborationist officials in all three.

Swiss and Swedish newspapers tell of a major uprising from Metz to Avignon—almost the entire length of Eastern France. They add that the patriots have been receiving heavy shipments of arms from the Allies for weeks in order to enable them to attack Germans and collaborationists in force. Widespread sabotage of railway and communications installations is reported.

German occupation troops are reported to have called for reinforcements to deal with the growing interior menace of the French underground. Roads are jammed with collaborationists trying to escape to the protection of the Germans. Some estimates put the number of armed Frenchmen preparing to rise at 500,000.

This is a sizable force for the Germans to try to handle in addition to trying to combat the Allied invasion. The Germans made effective use of the fifth column when they conquered France in 1940. Now it seems they are about to discover how well the French patriots have made use of the four years in which they have been preparing for retaliation.

New Foods Are in Store For the Postwar Era

ONE PERSON in five gainfully employed today is engaged in the food industry. Two hundred years ago eighty per cent of all gainful employment came from food. This change has been brought about by developments of the machine age, not by a diminution of appetites.

And the evolutionary process will continue to change the shape of things to eat after the war as never before, according to Clarence Francis, chairman of the board of directors of one of the largest food processing and distributing companies in the United States. Although he predicts that the food industry will face the most competitive era the world has ever seen after the war, Mr. Francis is not pessimistic.

New products by the hundreds, new styles and materials in packages, new services and new methods of transportation will abound in the postwar food picture, according to Francis. Research is developing packages of a beauty and economy never known before to compete on the grocer's shelves, he said.

Air transportation of fresh fruits and vegetables is being experimented with, and the food company executive is confident that the cost will be brought in line with surface transportation costs. Many items formerly discarded as waste will enter food distribution channels after the war. Many kinds of fish, used only for fertilizer before the war, are now being made into attractive spreads.

The basis for Mr. Francis' prediction that competition in the food business after the war will be keener than ever is his conviction that nine months after the start of postwar industrial reconversion the national economy will drop from a plane of $160,000,000,000 to that represented by a national income of $95,000,000,000. There are two schools of thought on that, but he is on safe ground when he prophesies that the things people will eat after the war will differ in many respects from the foods of 1940. Dietary changes have followed every war.

The Inevitable Dollar Detail

IN THIS WAR, as in the last war, the army hardly ever moves without its inevitable dollar detail bringing up the rear. It is the business of this detail to pay damages.

Did an army jeep racing madly for the front in North Africa come into such violent collision with an Arab and his donkey as to kill both? If so, the widow received $200 for the loss of her husband and $250 for the loss of the donkey. The price was determined by what is called a custom of the country.

But if the unfortunate Arab and his mule strayed into the path of gunfire, either enemy or American, and suffered the same fatal consequences, the dollar detail would firmly decline to pay.

The War and Navy departments want the facts known about their claims payments because they have found evidence of the revival of a rumor that was widely circulated during World War I. This rumor had it that every American advance was followed by French peasants waving demands for rent for trench and foxhole space on their land. The rumor was entirely false, but it is heard to this day. But the American Expeditionary Force did pay rent for land back of the front which it used for training and maneuvers.

Some day these claims may be charged to the enemy, but they are now paid promptly in the interest of good will, and perhaps not without some thought of what an unpaid claimant can purloin in the name of what he may call justice.

Add this to your collection of New Deal definitions: A consultant is a man who knows less about your business than you do and gets paid more for telling you how to run it than you could possibly make out of it even if you ran it right instead of the way he told you.

The Japs know they cannot win the war by taking Changsha, or any other Chinese city, but they are badly in need of retrieving the face lost in the Southwest Pacific.

A Kansas editor who is evidently no New Dealer is credited with the smartest postwar plan to date. He would give the alphabet back to the children.

What a perfect world this would be, observes our curstone philosopher, if the fish bit as rudely as the mosquito.

The Browser's Bookshelf

By MARSHALL MASLIN

In "Presidential Agent" (Viking Press), Upton Sinclair has carried his character Lanny Budd (an atrociously named hero) on to those years that immediately preceded World War I. . . . and even though Upton Sinclair totally lacks the light touch or any variety in his writing, nevertheless you will find in this book a detailed, fictionalized history of those tremendous years.

The Browser is hardly an enthusiastic admirer of Mr. Sinclair's fiction, Pulitzer prize winner though he may be. His objection to that remarkable human being as a teller of tales is that he takes his craft too lightly. Mr. Sinclair might reply that he takes it very seriously indeed. But in fact he uses the narrative form as a vehicle for expressing his social, economic and political ideas and the pamphleteer always fails to give reality to his product. . . . By this the Browser is not implying that "Presidential Agent" is a dull book. It is far from that. In fact, it is a fascinating melange of fact, insight, gossip, rumor, and implication.

In this, the fifth of the books about Lanny Budd in Europe, Lanny becomes the trusted, confidential agent of President Roosevelt. As such he wanders over the face of Europe talking to all the great and near great, to Hitler and Goebbels and Goering and the wives of the two G's, listening to fabulous confessions and confidences, piercing to the heart of intrigue and conflict and gathering the unwritten contemporary history of another continent for his famous patron. The total impact is enormously informing.

Somerset Maugham has been offered $100,000 for the movie rights of "The Razor's Edge." Macmillan has just published "Sam Brannan and the Golden Fleece," a fictionalized biography by Reva Scott of one of California's most amazing pioneers. A powerful, dynamic individual he never quite pulled it off. He achieved great wealth, died in poverty, somehow never acquired the trust of his fellow men.

In the fall Dutton will publish a book by a Seabee lieutenant, W. B. Hule, entitled "Can Do." Of the Seabees a marine once wrote: "So when we reach the Isle of Jap. With our caps at a jaunty tilt, We will enter the City of Tokyo On roads the Seabees built."

In "When Johnny Comes Marching Home" Dixon Weir does not say that our soldiers will not be changed in detail when they are released from combat, but he does insist that "As he went forth, so he will return: friendly, generous, easy-going, brave, the citizen-soldier of America." . . . And that's about enough from Marshall Maslin.

Summer Vacation For Solons Will Likely Be Short

By Central Press

WASHINGTON — You can write it down that Congress will not take any lengthy vacation this summer—political conventions in Chicago and campaigning at home to the contrary notwithstanding.

Republicans in the Senate and House are behind this determination to keep the nation's legislators on the job in Washington. One highly-placed Republican Senate leader expressed it this way:

"It would look mighty funny, wouldn't it, if Congress wasn't in session during the coming climactic days of the war in Europe? There isn't much we could do about it, but it is just the psychology of the whole matter that counts."

With all members of the lower chamber up for election, the House is expected to be periodically vacant, but Republican leaders are determined to push their plan for three-day recesses with Congress constantly subject to call.

Senate Republicans will probably concur with their House colleagues in the hope of keeping the Democratic opposition on edge in event any major legislation should pop up this summer.

Despite the belief that Congress should not recess, both Houses are pressing to clear legislative calendars of "must" bills before June 26 when the Republican convention meet in Chicago. Republicans hope to go there at least for a few days.

Hunters Will Get Shells
Pistol Packin' Public is going to get a break in the way of more ammunition, but shooting galleries are still out. Civilians will begin to get substantial deliveries of hitherto scarce small arms ammunition by July.

The ammunition will include center and rim fire cartridges and shotgun shells and may be used for hunting, and controlling predatory animals, and birds and animals which destroy crops. It will also be made available for police work and other essential activities.

Sedition Trial Drags Out
It becomes increasingly apparent that the mass sedition conspiracy trial in Washington is going to go on for many, many months—perhaps even the nine or ten defense counsel have predicted.

Recently Prosecutors O. John Rogge and Joseph Burns completed the direct testimony of their first witness, one-time Bundist Peter Gissibi, who took the stand for the first time on May 23.

But Gissibi still faced the most grueling part of his appearance at the trial—and it might be prolonged for a week or two. He still had to undergo the ordeal of hostile questioning under defense cross-examination.

The trial is in its ninth week. Prosecution testimony has progressed chronologically from the beginning of the American Nazi movement only to 1938—three years prior to alleged offenses of the twenty-nine defendants that are prosecutable under the statute of limitations.

Eleven Implicated

The period Gissibi testified about dated back to 1922, when he and two brothers—one of them now an elite guard officer in Germany—and other young Germans in Chicago formed the Teutonia society, which, through several transformations, eventually became the German-American Bund.

His story terminated in 1938, because he dropped out of the Bund that year. He is said to have become disillusioned about the Nazis on a trip to Germany—but prosecutors did not attempt to elicit any explanation from him about why he severed Bund connections in direct examination.

As he completed his story, he had implicated only eleven of the twenty-nine defendants—some as Bundists, some as speakers at Bundist meetings, and others as having corresponded with a German Nazi whose function, Gissibi said, was to foment anti-Semitism throughout the world.

THE GERMAN INVASION REACHES ENGLAND AT LAST

Vast Pacific Ocean Has Been Conquered By United States Navy, Lawrence Says

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON, June 18—Some-times events creep up so slowly, unfolding only a little at a time, that the general public scarcely realizes what the whole picture means. For the fact is that a sensational step has just been taken. Stated briefly, it is that the United States Navy has actually conquered the Pacific ocean.

To conquer an ocean as vast as the Pacific in the short space of two and a half years, against a first-class naval power which had all the advantage of previously prepared positions and strategic islands, is a feat without parallel in world history.

For more than forty years students of theoretical war in the Pacific have studied maps and distances, supply problems and tactical games, but all these studies have gone back to one central thought—the Marianas islands are the key to the Pacific ocean in any war with Japan.

Essential Location

Long before air power was dreamed of, long before big aircraft carriers or land-based planes could be seriously considered as a part of offensive or defensive power, the United States Navy strategists looked upon the Marianas islands as the absolutely essential location that forms the gateway to Japan, to China, to the Philippines, to the Netherlands East Indies and to the Aleutian islands. With air power added and the Japanese fleet forced back to the homeland, conquest of the Pacific has come sooner than expected.

The Marianas have not yet been established as a base. Hard fighting lies ahead. There are many islands to be captured and airfields as well as supply depots to be constructed. But it is no secret now—the strategy of the United States is out in the open where the Japanese as well as everybody else in the world can see. Our naval and army air forces can come down from the north and up from the south, and they can strike straight across the Pacific toward the west. The domination of the Pacific ocean is now complete.

Omnibian Job.

This achievement has been made possible not merely through surface ships but through powerful instruments of war below the surface as well as above. The submarines, always less spectacular than the air-planes, have whittled away the cargo ships of the Japanese navy and made the supply problem for her fleet precarious.

This has been an omnibian job. The army, the navy and the Marine corps, the air forces and the submarine forces—all, in fact, all branches of the armed services—have participated. It is the success of what is now being called the "task force"—which has been another way of merely saying that the functional jurisdictions are not so important just so long as everything that is needed to perform a particular task is assembled at the right time in one place under one command.

The mobile task force, however, is not the same today as it was thought of three and four years ago. It is not just a collection of battleships and cruisers and destroyers. It contains its own system of supply which moves along with the fleet. It contains enough aircraft carrier so that literally hundreds of planes can be launched from the decks of the ships in consistent and repeated attacks.

Homeland Blasting Near

Indeed, our task forces have reached the proportions now that it would not be at all surprising if some day they were big enough or bold enough to stand a few miles off the coast of Japan and deliberately bomb her cities and towns. The Japanese, of course, have not only anti-aircraft fire but land-based planes in such large numbers as to be able to inflict heavy losses on a task force. But the time will come when the land bases of the Japanese will be severely impaired by attacks such as our superfortresses—the B-29's—have just begun from bases in China.

The Japanese military mind evidently thought that when it attacked us at Pearl Harbor, we were to be deprived of offensive power in the Pacific for all time. The Japanese believed when they went into the Netherlands East Indies they could entrench themselves with sufficient air bases to keep us fighting for decades against hopeless odds. They thought, too, that China was out of the war and could soon be put out of the war and that bases from China were impracticable for us. They didn't count on American industrial skill or the bravery of our fighting men.

For American inventive genius, American designers, American engine-makers, American managers and American workers have all combined to give our daring soldiers, sailors and marines tools such as no nation has ever had. We are winning the war in the Pacific.

Refreshing Departure

From the Wall Street Journal

Congress, says the George committee of the Senate on postwar planning, should take no summer recess until it acts upon this committee's sixteen recommendations for legislative encouragement of private industry in its task of providing jobs for eight to ten million prewar working force. Industry, the committee insists, can meet the challenge if, but only if, it has a minimum of government interference.

Here is a refreshing and decidedly promising departure from the "or else" attitude toward the private enterprise system which was general among political officeholders during the 1930s and still persists among a considerable number of them. More important than the nature of its specific recommendations is the committee's broad declaration of principle—that should determine governmental action in the transition period and thereafter. If business is to go ahead and expand, says the committee, it must have certainty that the "rules of the game" will not be altered suddenly or capriciously, that departmental directives are to decrease in number, that Congress will make no more sweeping delegations of power, that government is to practice no discrimination in favor of any segment of the economy and that a sound and defined fiscal policy is to be established.

The committee's specific recommendations are themselves fairly general in nature. They offer no finished blueprint for postwar prosperity. Wisely, no doubt, the committee has been content to urge early action on the subjects upon which the Baruch-Hancock report has already laid great stress—quick release and clearing of plants no longer busy with war work, rapid but orderly marketing of governmental surpluses, study of the duration of price controls and rationing, the tentative framing of a postwar budget on a strict economy basis, immediate study of feasible reduction in tax rates.

If Congress resolutely attacks these sectors of the transition front, with a convincing demonstration of its will to defeat the economic planners for an authoritarian state, the American enterprise system will be able to provide more and steadier employment for the whole of the postwar working force than would any possible aggregation of public job-making projects—and will be more than willing to do so.

A Japanese Complex

From the Altoona, Pa., Tribune

There is additional evidence in the South Pacific war news that Japanese troops, when facing Americans have an inferiority complex that is counting heavily in favor of the United Nations.

Recent news, trickling out of Japan, is that Tokyo propaganda is making an effort to build up a charge of savagery against Americans. The purpose could be to rebut the exposure of Japanese treatment of American and Filipino troops captured at Bataan and Corregidor, but it also would serve to inspire the Japanese to greater war efforts in the homeland.

The Japanese high command must be somewhat desperate as a result of losing in every battle the Americans launch against them. Not since the tide turned have the Japs given United States troops or warships a setback. The latest thrust by General MacArthur's forces offered the Japanese a chance to "bloody America's nose" but as usual they, instead, took it on the proboscis.

The attack was a bold move and but for their inferiority complex the Japs would have leaped to make a counter-attack. That is what Americans would have done under similar circumstances.

An Intricate Problem

From the Morgantown, W. Va., Post

"Reconversion" is a word which is becoming increasingly common not only in talk about our postwar economy, but even as a wartime measure in certain industries where the needs of the armed forces have been met.

This is a problem of the greatest intricacy and complexity, and its solution will call for all the ingenuity that can be summoned by the Government's war production agencies and private industry.

Something of the nature of this problem was illustrated recently by Mr. Herbert Stein, who won a $25,000 first prize in a nation-wide contest for postwar employment programs. "For example," wrote Mr. Stein, "although there will be a great demand for refrigerators, producers of refrigerators may be unable to hire workers because their remaining munitions work prevents freeing one complete assembly line,

Roosevelt Plan Is Termed Skeleton Of Hull Formula

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, June 18 — Sly Mr. Roosevelt followed his usual course in evolving his announced blueprint for the postwar world order.

He let the Wallaces, Willkies and Welleses fight out the issues in public while he sat back and said nothing. Then he worked out a common ground formula, discarding all the ideas of all of them for a skeleton scheme first announced in public by State Secretary Hull.

It caused considerable grumbling among both Republican and Democratic senators. Men like Senator Ball, who wanted an international police force and, in fact, an internationalized world were disappointed, but the ex-isolationist Senator Vandenberg was fairly well pleased. He whispered to newsmen behind his hand that it looked like the president was coming around to the Midwest position.

Obviously Acceptable

But it was obvious such a scheme would pass the Senate overwhelmingly when it comes up, as it must, in the form of a treaty. It is in harmony with both the Smith-Connally resolution, and the Mackinac Island declaration of the Republicans.

To that extent unity is probable, but actually the formula settles no more than the first point at issue. The details of how it is worked out will give the postwar world its character.

For instance, congressmen have concluded that in the establishment of the Italian government so far, we have run third with Russia on top there, and friends of Great Britain in second position. Little has been said on the floor, but this has been a main topic in the cloak-rooms since the speech of Senator Bridges, asking if Mr. Roosevelt had lost the initiative in Europe.

This situation unquestionably is the primary reason for the coming visit of Gen. DeGaulle to the White House. We also run about third in his organization.

Third in All Europe

Now it is clear that if Mr. Roosevelt does not do better in France than he did in Italy, we will in reality be third in all Europe, no matter how much equality we seem to enjoy in the blueprint formula presented.

So also within the formula itself. The top council composed of the United States, Great Britain, Russia and China (the names are always used in that order) no doubt will dominate the assembly and seem to give control of the world jointly to the four great powers. The assembly of all the nations presumably will not meet often and may act only in an advisory capacity.

But with Russia on top in Europe and Britain clinging to her empire, our influence in reality no doubt will be restricted to this hemisphere. Britain and Russia always have had more authority in the Far East than we had, and there is no noticeable change in that situation yet.

These are the facts of life in the world beyond the formula and apt to be more important than it is.

No Super State

But there is to be no super state, and no surrender of sovereignty, and all are to keep their arms individually. Thus it follows the same line advocated and predicted in this column from the beginning of the discussion.

Other particular agreements now in the negotiating mill are hardly within sight of political unity. In advance of the Bretton Woods monetary conference, the experts of practically all the nations have been gathered together secretly.

Harry White, director of monetary research in the Treasury, assembled them at Atlantic City in an effort to get what was described as "an agreement at the expert level" in advance of the conference.

But in this instance, too, the important thing will be the value of gold and the dollar in relation with other currencies, rather than the formula devised for future international monetary negotiations.

or because their ordinary suppliers of refrigerator components are tied up with war work, or because potential suppliers of a few special-purpose machine tools are otherwise engaged, or because the producers do not have sufficient liquid funds to make necessary plant alterations.

The solution to this problem will not be found unless those federal agencies charged with the responsibility of making all necessary arrangements for a smooth and uninterrupted flow of war goods are equally zealous, when reconversion starts, to see that the way is cleared all along the line for effective production of peacetime goods. It will not do simply to release a factory or part of a factory from its wartime contracts; if serious dislocations are to be avoided and civilian goods production is to be resumed, the necessary arrangements for men, material, and capital will have to be made.

"Voice in the Wind" Opens at Maryland Today

The dramatic, moving story of two lovers whose love for each other was strong enough to withstand forcible separation by the Nazis and deep enough to live past death itself opens today at the Maryland theater through United Artists release. The film is "Voice in the Wind," initial production by Arthur Ripley and Rudolph Monty.

Francis Lederer one of the screen's most popular actors is starred in a role that requires that he play two different characters. He enacts both the part of Jan Volny, a courageous Czech pianist who used his musical ability as a weapon against the Nazis, and that of a half-mad wanderer, El Hombre, who seeks a clue to his own identity.

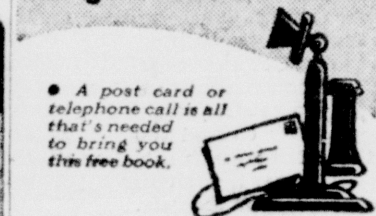

Co-starred with Lederer is Sigrid Gurie in a role which gives her full opportunity to demonstrate her many dramatic talents. Miss Gurie plays Volny's sweetheart, a woman who follows her love across two continents, to a place of desolation and death.

decided to give John Hubbard, Bob Haymes, Judy Clark, Jane Frazee and the rest of the cast a cocktail party at her home. Joan had just hired a new maid, and hereby hangs another new maid's attitude to add to the anthology.

When the first couple arrived, the maid was told by Miss Davis to ask what they would like to drink.

The husband said, "Scotch and soda, please, for both of us."

The maid took the order and disappeared.

A few moments later, she returned carrying a tray. On the tray sat two glasses, filled with scotch, and a little dish with soda-bicarbonate of soda.

Miss Davis thinks she will forget about having guests for the duration!

More than 100 populated places were captured, Moscow said, and Góvorov was made a marshal of the Soviet union because of the successful offensive. The troops under Góvorov smashed through the Mannerheim line within twenty-four hours after reaching it, having previously cracked two Finnish defense lines which Russian officers said were the strongest yet encountered in the war.

Góvorov directed the 1939-40 offensive which cracked the Mannerheim line and brought about Finnish capitulation. It took the Russians nearly four months in that previous conflict.

And Hitler, he was asked, is he still the great shining idol of Germany?

Next came Oberleutnant Kurt Blank, 25, commandant of the stronghold, a sneering, hard-jawed Nazi.

Straight-faced he said "the only reason we surrendered was that you were using flame throwers. We would have been burned to death."

The whole assault was observed and not a flame thrower was used. "Otherwise," he said, "we would have held out for weeks. We are going to win this war. An army such as the German army which fought so bravely just can't be beaten."

Numerous oil refineries and depots were battered in the Hamburg area raid, the headquarters announcement said.

The bombing was done through clouds and detailed results could not be announced immediately, but the supreme headquarters announcement said the weather was not thick enough to keep German fighters grounded had they been eager for combat. Only about 800 American fighters accompanied the bombers.

Nelson Captures Golf Tournament By Four Strokes

Sgt. Vic Ghezzi Is Second and Mike Turnesa Finishes Third

By FRITZ HOWELL

NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y., June 18 (AP)—Byron Nelson, of Toledo, O., former P.G.A. and National open champion, won $2,666.65 in war bonds today as he spread-eagled the field to take the New York Red Cross tournament with a twelve-hole score of 175, or thirteen under par.

Sgt. Vic Ghezzi, of Atlantic City,

N. J., was second, four strokes back, and Mike Turnesa, of White Plains,

N. Y., was third with 284, a stroke ahead of Gene Sarazen, of Darien, Conn., who turned in the final day's top round with a 68.

Nelson, after scoring only three bogies against fifteen birdies on the first five-tee holes, slipped over par five times on the last eighteen, but countered with four birdies and an eagle. The eagle came on the 487-yard ninth, where he reached the green with a wood and an iron—

a distance of just thirteen yards under 1,500 feet—and dropped a ten-foot putt.

Nelson, suffering a sore arm, threw

none of his famed "bloopers" balls

and was wild and ineffective in losing

his third game of the year.

Mort Cooper coasted to his sixth

triumph as his mates pounded out

thirteen hits off three Pirate hurl-

ers. Kurowski also hit a four-bagger in the first contest. Mort allowed six hits, walked no one and struck out three. The scores:

League-Leading Cardinals Split With Buccaneers

Redbirds Lose 3-1 after Whipping Pirates in Opener 12-2

ST. LOUIS, June 18 (AP)—The league-leading St. Louis Cardinals split a doubleheader with the second place Pittsburgh Pirates today, winning the first game 12 to 2, then dropping the nightcap 3 to 1 as Pittsburgh's Ostermuller turned in a sparkling three-hit mound performance.

Ostermuller almost completely silenced the power hitters in the Cardinal lineup and only White-

Kurovski's eleventh home run of the season in the seventh inning prevented a shutout.

The Pirates jumped on Max Lan-ter for their three runs in the opening inning and after that the league leaders never had a chance.

In the opener, the Cards drove Rip Sewell from the mound after the first inning when he gave up five hits and two walks.

Sewell, suffering a sore arm, threw

none of his famed "bloopers" balls

and was wild and ineffective in losing

his third game of the year.

Mort Cooper coasted to his sixth

triumph as his mates pounded out

thirteen hits off three Pirate hurl-

ers. Kurowski also hit a four-bag-

ger in the first contest. Mort allowed six hits, walked no one and

struck out three. The scores:

Oakland Man Elected
Irvin Rudy, of Oakland, member of the local chapter, was elected finance officer.

Other officers elected were: Charles L. Mobley, Hagerstown, senior vice commander; Albert O. Rabassa, Baltimore, junior vice commander; Meyer Berkson, Hagerstown, inspector; Harry P. Hurd, Hagerstown, historian; and Robert M. Stocklaker, Hagerstown, sergeant-at-arms.

Parrish, Baltimore, adjutant; Riley E. Miller, Baltimore, chief of staff; Luther W. Seal, Hagerstown, American officer; Robert H. Paul, Annapolis, legislative officer, and Maj. George E. Parker, United States Army retired, Lutherville, Md., service officer.

Andrew N. Segal, retiring department commander, was elected national executive committee member for two years.
Election of Leib as department commander brings about his automatic resignation as commander of the local chapter. W. Olive Brant, senior vice commander of Mountain Chapter No. 166, will become commander here until the regular election in September. Leib has been appointed adjutant by the new post commander.

Department officers were installed by Harold M. Hamilton, Lancaster, Pa., national senior service commander of the order. He also presented Purple Heart medals to Edward Doyle, William J. Park and George T. McCormick, of Lonaconing, and John F. Blubaugh, R.D. 1, Frostburg.

Soldier Praises Medical Corpsmen For Braving Danger

Prompt action by medical corpsmen who accompanied the soldiers who formed the assault waves at the beachhead in France, saved the life of Pfc. Glenn M. True, after he had been badly wounded, according to his buddy, Pfc. Charles E. Harrison, of Donora, Pa.

Tribute to the unarmed soldiers of the medical corps was paid by Pvt. Harrison, who in a dispatch from the European theater related that he and Pvt. True were together when a bullet went through True's helmet and as they examined the helmet an eighty-eight tank shell went off in their faces.

The blast, Harrison said, lifted him off the ground but he suffered no open wound. Pvt. True however was badly wounded and as his buddy prepared to give first aid the medics showed up and unquestionably, in the opinion of Harrison, their prompt first aid treatment saved True's life.

D.S.C. IS AWARDED CAPT. K. G. JEWELL
HEADQUARTERS, UNITED STATES STRATEGIC AIR FORCES IN EUROPE—Capt. Kenneth G. Jewell, U. S. bomber pilot who showed extraordinary bravery in retaining command of his plane after being severely wounded on a flight over Germany, recently received the Distinguished Service Cross, his fifth military award.

The award was made by Brigadier General Leon Johnson of the air force at a general hospital in England, where Capt. Jewell is recovering from his injuries. Capt. Jewell was born in Cumberland, Md., but he and his wife now have their residence at Bedford Valley, Pa.

Capt. Jewell was the pilot of a Liberator bomber on a mission against military objective at Brandenburg, Germany, on March 7. Before reaching the target, his plane was hit several times by anti-aircraft shells and a large fragment of shell penetrated his left leg, shattering the bone and severing a vein. Capt. Jewell fought against unconsciousness, retained command of his plane, and gave necessary instructions for a crash landing.

Previously Capt. Jewell had brought back a damaged Liberator to his home base, flying 169 miles on only one engine. His awards include the Distinguished Flying Cross, the Purple Heart, the Silver Star, and the Air Medal with three clusters.

Court Orders Son To Give Up Deed To Father's Land

Property on Evitt's Creek Involved in Action in Circuit Court

Millard M. Rice, 78, was upheld in his suit to compel his son, Edgar S. Rice and daughter-in-law, Odell H. Rice, to relinquish a deed to his property along Evitt's creek, Allegany county. The decision was handed down Saturday by Associate Judge William A. Huster, in circuit court. A demurrer filed by Edward J. Ryan, attorney for defendants, was dismissed by the court.

The suit, filed in February, resulted from an agreement between the father and son made last year when mortgage foreclosure proceedings were scheduled.

Land Will Be Sold
Under the decision the property will be sold to Albert E. Windish, of this city, for $9,500 and the son will be repaid for money advanced to his father to avert a mortgage foreclosure.

Thomas Lohr Richards and Albert A. Doub, Jr., attorneys for the defendant, contended that the son paid $1,001.12 to the father last year and the deed was made with the understanding it was security for the loan, with the agreement that the father could sell the property when he received a seasonable offer. The son refused to relinquish the deed, the attorneys alleged.

Suit Is Settled
A confessed judgment of $126 and costs was entered in circuit court by Richard Strong, in favor of Mrs. Helen Barley, mother of Earl R. Barley. A damage action was then withdrawn by Edward J. Ryan, attorney for Mrs. Barley. It was charged that Barley, a minor, was struck by Strong and as a result of his injuries lost nine days work and incurred medical expenses.

Earl Myers of this city filed a petition Saturday to restrain Mrs. Blanche Myers from removing furniture from the warehouse of the Cumberland Improvement Company. Judge Huster ordered the defendant to show cause why the injunction should not be issued.

Attendance Mark Established at Constitution Pool

1,654 Persons Pay To Swim; War Bond Program Is Added Feature

A new record for total attendance and paid admissions was established yesterday at Constitution park's swimming pool, according to Nestor "Ted" Licot, manager.

At the close of the day's business Licot said that paid admissions totaled 1,654, or forty-four more than the previous high of 1,610 registered two years ago.

In addition to the cash customers 100 Boy Scouts and 250 servicemen used the pool between 10 a. m. and 10 p. m.

Temperature of the water was eighty degrees while outside the pool the mercury hovered about the 100-degree mark.

As a special feature of the Fifth War Loan drive, Elbert "Slim" Walsh, former city patrolman and now a member of the United States Maritime Service, gave a demonstration in his all-rubber overboard suit following a dive from the high board at the pool.

Joseph M. Naughton, general chairman of the war bond campaign in Allegany county, estimated that 2,500 witnessed the demonstration which lasted about ten minutes.

An appeal in behalf of the drive was made by Lt. (jg) Ruth N. Danelser, recruiting officer for the WAVES, over the public address system provided by Nelson W. Russell, who acted as master of ceremonies.

Licot co-operated in the program by furnishing additional entertainment. Miss Eugenia Spano sang several songs and diving performances were given by Patty Lewis and James Castle. A clown act was also presented.

MARYLAND BOARD ASKS FOR CORE DRILLING PROJECT
ANNAPOLIS, Md., June 18.—(AP)—Governor O'Connor reported today that the Maryland Board of Natural Resources had asked the United States Bureau of Mines to carry out a recently proposed core drilling project in an attempt to develop new coal mines in Allegany county.

The project suggested by the Maryland Department of Geology, Mines and Water Resources was aimed at maintaining the economic security of the people of Frostburg and other communities in the Georges Creek basin, dependent on the maintenance of the coal production in that area, the governor said.

Most of the coal produced in that region comes from the Big Vein. In order to avert an extended decline in output in this basin, underlying coal seams, not yet adequately explored, would have to be developed, O'Connor continued.

Reporting that all of the acreage of the Big Vein coal had been developed, the state's chief executive warned that the reserves of this coal were limited.

The department of mines has recommended a program of core drilling that will total 13,050 feet in the Georges Creek basin, 3,400 feet in the Upper Potomac basin, and approximately 8,000 feet in other Garrett county basins, at a total estimated cost of $80,000.

O'Connor disclosed that in recent years the Maryland coal fields had not held their own in nationwide production.
